ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Daniel B. Cornfield is a Professor of Sociology at Vanderbilt University and Editor-in-Chief of Work and Occupations. His multiple journal articles and books address labor, civil rights, immigration, and artist communities, including his Beyond the Beat: Musicians Building Community in Nashville (Princeton University Press) and Becoming a Mighty Voice (Russell Sage Foundation).

Catherine Corrigan-Brown is a Professor and Head of Sociology at the University of British Columbia, Canada. She is the author of Patterns of Protest (Stanford University Press, 2012) and Keeping the March Alive (New York University Press, 2023) on social movement activism and longevity.

Dennis C. Dickerson is the Reverend James Lawson Chair in History at Vanderbilt University. He has written four books including his latest work, The African Methodist Episcopal Church: A History (Cambridge University Press, 2020). He is finishing “A Brother in the Spirit of Gandhi”: William Stuart Nelson and the Religious Origins of the Civil Rights Movement.

Alessandro Giuseppe Drago is a PhD candidate at McGill University. He studies far-right political movements in the United States and Canada, with a focus on how and why they come to mobilize and engage in high-risk activism. His other research interests include populism, left-wing movements, and student movements.

Larry W. Isaac is the Gertrude Conaway Vanderbilt Professor of Sociology and Political Economy at Vanderbilt University and past Editor of the American Sociological Review. Specializing in anti-racist civil rights and labor movements, political economy of inequality, and historical sociology, he is an award-winning author of numerous scholarly articles.

Matthew Kearney is the author of The Social Order of Collective Action: The Wisconsin Uprising of 2011 about the massive protest that inspired the Occupy Movement, and several articles. He hosts Extinction Rebellion Radio. He has taught at Harvard, Emerson, the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and now the University of Liverpool.

Lisa Leitz is the Delp-Wilkinson Professor and Department Chair of Peace Studies at Chapman University. Since 2018, she has served as the Series Editor of Research in Social Movements, Conflicts and Change. She authored many articles, chapters, and the book Fighting for Peace: Veterans and Military Families in the Anti-Iraq War Movement (2014).

Matheus Mazzilli Pereira is a Professor of Sociology at the Universidade Federal do Rio Grande do Sul (UFRGS, Porto Alegre, Brazil), where he studies social movements with research emphases on the relations between social movements and culture and social movements and public policies. He received his PhD in Sociology from the same institution, with an interchange period at the University of California, Irvine. He is a member of the research group Association, Contestation and Engagement (GPACE/UFRGS).

Socrates Mbamalu is a student of War, Diplomacy and Society at Chapman University. His work as a journalist has appeared in Foreign Policy, Al Jazeera, VICE, and The Continent. He runs Aso Times, a Nigerian newspaper dedicated to telling stories outside mainstream media. His research interests include conflict and foreign policy in Africa.

Jaylene Murray is a Professor in the Department of Recreation and Tourism at Vancouver Island University, with a focus on outdoor recreation, sustainability, and land-based learning. She resides on the unceded territories of the Snuney-muxw First Nation and is extremely grateful for the opportunity to live and learn on their lands.

Marcelo Kunrath Silva is a Professor of Sociology at the Universidade Federal do Rio Grande do Sul (UFRGS, Porto Alegre, Brazil), developing research in the field of Political Sociology, with an emphasis on contentious politics processes. Currently, he conducts research on the relationship between religiosity and activism. He coordinates the research group Association, Contestation and Engagement (GPACE/UFRGS).

Dana M. Williams is a Professor of Sociology at California State University, Chico. They are the author of Black Flags and Social Movements: A Sociological Analysis of Movement Anarchism (Manchester University Press), and articles in International Journal of Comparative Sociology, Leisure Studies, Social Science Quarterly, Critical Sociology, and Journal of World-Systems Research.

Tarah Wright is a Professor in the Department of Earth and Environmental Sciences and Director of the Education for Sustainability Research Group at Dalhousie University. Her research focuses on education for sustainable development, with current emphasis on measuring pre-school children's bio-affinity, and the role of The Arts in encouraging pro-environmental behavior.
