Previously, he served as a Professor of Management and Human Resources at the Fisher College of Business and was a core faculty member of the Translational Data Analytics Institute (TDAI) at The Ohio State University. He received his Ph.D. in Industrial Relations and Human Resources from Rutgers University, and both his bachelor's and master's degrees in Human Resource Management from Renmin University of China. He has served as associate editor for three journals and on editorial boards of ten others. He has been an active volunteer of the HR Division of the Academy of Management, serving on its Executive Committee and participating in the leadership track.

Thomas Kelemen received his PhD in Management from the University of Oklahoma. He is currently an Assistant Professor of Management and the Robert F. Hagans Chair of Business at Kansas State University. He is also a Fulbright Scholar (2024) and a Visiting Scholar at Deakin University. He has published in academic journals such as the Academy of Management Journal, Journal of Organizational Behavior, and The Leadership Quarterly. His research focuses on leadership, organizational citizenship behavior, and job design.

Zanthippie Macrae is an undergraduate student in the Lee Business School and Honors College at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas. She is a small business owner with educational interests to gain admission into a top MBA program and career ambitions to serve as a successful woman business leader. Her research interests include the advancement of women leaders and changes in leadership across time.

Michael Matthews pursued graduate studies at the University of Oklahoma (2024) and is an Assistant Professor at the University of Texas, Rio Grande Valley. He has published in outlets such as Journal of Business Venturing and Leadership Quarterly. His research interests focus on employee well-being, social comparisons, and leadership. He is also passionate about bridging the gap between academic research and management practice and has written for several practitioner outlets, such as Harvard Business Review, California Management Review, Psychology Today, Fast Company, and MIT Sloan Management Review.

John W. Morton is an Assistant Professor of Management and Human Resources in the College of Business Administration at Cal Poly Pomona. His research focuses primarily on the areas of diversity management, lower skilled workers, workplace mistreatment, and leadership perceptions. Prior to joining Cal Poly Pomona, he completed a Postdoctoral Fellowship in the College of Business at Colorado State University. He received his PhD in Management from the University of California, Irvine, and a BA from the University of Hawaii at Manoa.

Marshall Pattie is a Professor of Management at James Madison University (JMU). He received a PhD from the University of Texas at Arlington, an MBA at George Washington University, and a BS at Texas Christian University. His research interests include managing expatriates, leadership, and strategic human resources. He has an active interest in patriotism and is involved in numerous civic organizations. He has served as an elected official and was a Civic Engagement Fellow at JMU.

Kirk D. Silvernail is an Assistant Professor-in-Residence at University of Nevada, Las Vegas. His primary research interests lie at the intersection of human resource management, organizational behavior, and international management. Much of his research is concerned with questions surrounding how a firm's human capital perceives and reacts to organizational justice and fairness. He is also interested in how employees identify with their organizations and how perceptions of the employment relationship vary across cultural and national contexts.

Shuhua Sun is an Associate Professor of Management and holds a Peter W. and Paul A. Callais Professorship in Entrepreneurship in the A.B. Freeman School of Business at Tulane University. He received his PhD in Management from the National University of Singapore.
