ABOUT THE CONTRIBUTORS

Sandy Boucher is a Lecturer in the Philosophy of Science at the University of New England. His research interests are mainly in the philosophy of biology (especially functions and teleology, the units of selection, species, natural kinds, macroevolution and paleobiology) and general philosophy of science, but he also works on issues in metaphilosophy and epistemology.

Hugh Breakey is the Deputy Director of Griffith University's Institute for Ethics, Governance and Law. His research in moral philosophy explores the ethical challenges in many diverse fields, including professional ethics, ethical decision-making, peacekeeping, argument, institutional governance, climate change, sustainable tourism, private property and intellectual property, and international law.

Daniel Brennan is a Lecturer at Bond University. He teaches in Ethics, and his research is in social and political philosophy, phenomenology and the philosophy of sport. He is the author of The Political Thought of Vaclav Havel (Brill) and Surfing and the Philosophy of Sport (Lexington).

Simon Burgess is a Lecturer in Ethical Leadership within the Business School at the University of New England (UNE), where he teaches Business Ethics and Organisational Leadership. Before coming to UNE, he worked in policy development, academia, and in management roles.

Howard Harris, UniSABusiness, University of South Australia, Adelaide, Australia, is an Associate Professor. Graduating as a Chemical Engineer, he worked in industry and commerce in Australia and the Pacific Islands before completing his PhD in Applied Philosophy. Now retired, he has taught Ethics to Business students in Australia and Asia.

Joseph Naimo is a Researcher in Philosophy and Professional Ethics, whilst also serves as an Activist and Advocate for people with disability. Much of his time is now spent as a Consultant and Disability Ethical Advisor.

Caitlin Rowe is a PhD candidate at the Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology where she is researching libraries, democracy and digital citizens in a contemporary surveillance culture. An Information Scientist and Privacy Professional she is currently working in the NFP sector as a Data Privacy Manager.

Adrian Walsh is a Professor of Philosophy and Political Theory in the School of Humanities, Arts and Social Sciences at the University of New England. He is also a Guest Professor in the Financial Ethics Research Group at the University of Gothenburg in Sweden. He works primarily in political philosophy, the philosophy of economics and applied ethics.

Matthew Wysel is a PhD candidate in Information Systems at the Centre for Agribusiness, UNE Business School, University of New England, Australia. His interests include the intersection of information theory, and economic and business models. He has worked in corporate and research roles across Western Europe and Australia in aerospace and the medical, industrial, and consumer technology industries and consults to businesses on maximising the value of their data.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS

Hosting the conference 2020 at University of New England (UNE) and editing this volume have been an enormously rewarding experience. We arranged to hold the conference in 2019, pre-pandemic (in a very different world, as it were). Initially with the outbreak of COVID-19 in March 2020, we were unsure whether the conference would go ahead and, if it did, what form it would take. We are very grateful to Hugh Breakey and Bligh Grant from the AAPAE who with great patience helped us work through the possibilities and the logistics of holding the conference on Zoom. We were heading into what was then very new territory, but it worked exceedingly well, with no real problems.

We are very grateful to Adam Piovarchy, Katie Chambers, Simon Burgess and Alex Dunn for all of the work they undertook cheerfully and incredibly efficiently through the planning stages and during the hosting of the conference itself.

We would like to thank all of the reviewers who took on the task of reading and evaluating the papers that make up this collection. This work is often uncelebrated but is obviously integral to the process of quality research publication.

Finally, we would like to thank our university, the UNE, for the unwavering support for the conference, especially during the first half of 2020 when it was not clear what kinds of activities would and would not be possible. The IT support, in particular, was excellent. We are also really grateful to the Faculty's research office for their encouragement and general assistance. The conference could not have gone ahead without such support.
